

Staff Retirement

Under federal law, there is no mandatory retirement age for staff. The University defines retirement as a voluntary action of separation from active staff service and assignment, after a minimum of 10 years at the University and without having full-time employment in the same or similar capacity as employed by the University. Ordinarily, those meeting the University's definition of retirement will also meet the eligibility requirements for drawing TIAA CREF retirement benefits.